TELEGRAPH NO. 12.

The Daily Press.

HONGKONG, JANUARY 16TH, 1890.

The staff and pupils of the Victoria College had the satisfaction on Monday last of celebrating their annual prize day for the first time in the magnificence of the new building. Two years ago there was a somewhat heated discussion as to whether the Central School (now the Victoria College) had fulfilled its visus et vobis. Public opinion went emphatically with the affirmative side in the discussion. Since then the school has steadily gone on increasing its claim to public confidence. The standard of education has been gradually but steadily raised, and since the new building was occupied there has been a large increase in the number of pupils. The maximum monthly enrolment in 1888 was 532; last year it was 789. The building affords accommodation for 960 boys, and the Head Master thinks there is every reason to believe it will be full in a year or two, if not next month. With the continued increase in the population of the Colony this expectation has abundant warrant, and the question naturally suggests itself: what is to be done, when the College is full, to meet the further demands that will arise? Mr. Watson, the Head Master, in the interesting report he read on Monday, said there were great advantages derived from the assembling of a large number of boys in one building, namely, one continuous system of education, as the larger number of boys to be promoted from the lower classes will gradually lessen the number of admissions into higher classes from other schools; a prolongation of the course, which will delay the undue promotion of backward boys, which has long been to their detriment and to the discredit of the upper classes; and the more effective shading off of degrees of knowledge, so that no great a stride in education will no longer follow on promotion. There must be some limit, however, beyond which it is not desirable to increase the number attending one school; in the case of the Victoria College that point is fixed by the limit of space, and is within a very short distance. But the next ten years will probably see the population increase by at least one half its present number, and there will be a corresponding increase in the demand for educational facilities. This demand may be met by the provision of district schools, which would relieve the Victoria College of some of the work of elementary education now performed by that institution and permit it to gradually raise its standard. On this subject it may be useful to refer back to the report of the Education Commission of 1882. The Governor's commission ran:—"Whereas Her Majesty's Government have sanctioned the building of five new Government Schools in this Colony; and whereas I deem it expedient, before authorising the plans and estimates for such schools, to inquire into what extent and at what cost, and under what circumstances such new schools may be made to take the place of the Central School in giving an elementary education; and whereas I deem it expedient to enquire further at what cost and with what staff and organisation the Central School may be raised into a collegiate institution, giving a higher education in English and science and drawing students from the new subsidiary schools and elsewhere," etc., and the Com-mision was appointed to inquire and report on these points. Their report came to the effect that the five new Government Schools could not take the place of the Central School, except at a greatly increased cost, and that they could not give an elementary education equal to that given at the Central School unless they had each an European head-master with qualified native assistants. As to the raising of the Central School into a collegiate institution, the Commission admitted that certain benefits would be gained by such a course, but looking at the matter from a financial point of view they thought the most advantageous employment of the public funds would be the development of the Central School on its basis, for which a new building and a larger staff of masters were indispensable. In addition to the Central School, thus improved, the report goes on to say, it would be of great advantage to the Colony to have five new schools on the scale originally proposed, each having a trained master for the teaching of English and a well-educated master for the teaching of Chinese. Seven years have passed since the report was penned and in the interval the circumstances have been somewhat altered by the rapid growth of the Colony. The difference between Sir John Pope Hennessy and the Education Commission was that while the former wanted to reorganise the educational work of the Colony by a radical wrench, the Commission were in favour of a gradual development. The latter policy has been followed, and with excellent results, which would have been still more excellent had the new building for the Central School been ready for occupation five or six years ago. The time is not far distant, however, when it will become necessary again to consider the whole question of education in the Colony with the view of determining what direction the further development should take. At present the Victoria College teaches from the A. B. C. up to the work required for the Oxford Senior Local Examination. At the Finance Committee.

THE ACTING COLONIAL SECRETARY laid on the table two financial minutes, one for $2,167, a revolt for road at Kowloon and one for $250 as a gratuity for Mr. Bruce Shepherd for compiling an index.

Referred to the Finance Committee.

THE OBSERVATORY.

Hon. A. E. MACLEAN.—Sir, I beg to ask when it is the intention of the Government to appoint a Committee to inquire into the work of the Observatory.

His EXCELLENCY.—The hon. member has only just given me notice of a question to that effect, but I am willing to waive the notice as there is no objection to answering the question at once. It has been the intention of the Government for the last three months to appoint a Committee to inquire into the work of the Observatory.

Mr. MACLEAN.—Sir, I beg to move that the Committee be appointed.

Mr. CHADWICK.—Sir, I beg to move that the Committee be appointed.

BILL TO APPOINT AN ADDITIONAL MEMBER TO THE SANITARY BOARD.

THE ACTING ATTORNEY-GENERAL.—I beg to move the first reading of a Bill entitled "Ordinary to appoint an Additional Member to the Sanitary Board." The object of this Bill is to amend the Government Ordinance of 1882, so as to add Mr. Chadwick to be an Additional Member of the Sanitary Board as constituted by the Public Health Ordinance.

THE ACTING COLONIAL SECRETARY seconded.

His EXCELLENCY.—Mr. Chadwick has been sent here at my request by the Secretary of State to help the Colony generally out of the difficulties of the water supply.

Mr. MACLEAN.—Sir, I beg to move that the Committee be appointed.

Mr. CHADWICK.—Sir, I beg to move that the Committee be appointed.

THE BILL IS READ.
